Special Issue on Organization Studies

Call for Papers

The Internet revolution and rapid technological change have brought about innovations in patterns, efficiency and products, driving the emergence of subversives. Enterprise leaders are facing the greatest subversive change since the Industrial Revolution era, and need creative organizational restructuring urgently. In addition, the loss of demographic dividend, the fluctuation of exchange rate, the serious homogenization competition, the intergenerational change of consumers, the increase of customer expectations, and the macro-control of policies also bring great challenges to the development of enterprises. Therefore, starting from the strategic planning of enterprises, we should pay attention to the elements of organizational design, personnel training and cultural shaping. We should have an insight into the needs of all parties in the process of change, enhance the thinking and ability of leaders of change, and examine the effectiveness of enterprise organizational development.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original researches and review articles on exploring organization studies. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Enterprises organizational structure
- Organizational environment
- Ecological organization and management
- Market, technology and talents drive innovative organization
- Relationships between organization and performance
- Organizational strategy and decision making
- Organizational rules and regulations
- Personnel relations in organization
- Organizational change, corporate culture and leadership
- Organization analysis

Authors should read over the journal’s For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal’s Paper Submission System.

Please kindly notice that the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title is supposed to be specified and the research field “Special Issue – Organization Studies” should be chosen during your submission.
