Special Issue on Agricultural Economy

Call for Papers

Agricultural economics is a branch of applied economics that takes the tools of both micro and macroeconomics and uses them to solve problems in a specific area. With food inflation soaring and agricultural disputes at the heart of the collapse of the latest round of world trade talks, the subject has seldom been so topical. The goal of this special issue is to provide a platform for scientists and academicians all over the world to promote, share, and discuss various new issues and developments in this area of Agricultural Economy.

In this special issue, we invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles that explore Agricultural Economy. In this special issue, potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Agricultural environment and natural resources
- Food and consumer economics
- Production economics and farm management
- Agricultural finance, policy, marketing and farm
- Land, output, and yields
- Agribusiness management
- Food and agricultural marketing

Authors should read over the journal’s For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal’s Paper Submission System.

Please kindly specify the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title. The research field “Special Issue - Agricultural Economy” should be selected during your submission.
