Special Issue on Administrative Law

Call for Papers

From the basic principles of administrative law, the principle of "administration according to law" includes the separation of law and administration, the restriction of law on administration, and the concepts of democracy and liberalism. Firstly, the authority of the administrative organs is determined from the organizational law; secondly, how to regulate the administrative power from the perspective of the operation of the administrative power; finally, how to apply administrative relief if the administrative power infringes on private rights and interests. This is essentially a path of “power-control theory”, reflecting the context of classical liberalism. Faced with increasingly complex social phenomena and administrative tasks, the theory of administrative law is also facing various challenges.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original researches and review articles on exploring administrative law. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Administrative law and administrative power
- Administrative legal relationship
- The principle of administrative law
- Administrative discretion
- Administrative procedure law and administrative review law
- Administrative judicial practice
- Legal government construction
- Government information publicity
- Construction of information-based legal system
- Reform of the administrative system

Authors should read over the journal’s For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal’s Paper Submission System.

Please kindly notice that the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title is supposed to be specified and the research field “Special Issue – Administrative Law” should be chosen during your submission.
