Special Issue on Crime and Punishment

Call for Papers

The formal notion of crime originates from the principle of a legally prescribed punishment for a specified crime, which emphasizes the criminal illegality of behavior and takes criminal illegality as the sole criterion to distinguish crime from non-crime. Punishment refers to the tendency to punish the perpetrator to the same extent as the crime of the perpetrator. It has various forms of expression. Punishment depends on the degree of dependence of a country's criminal control on penalties. Can punishment theory effectively curb the rapid development of crime? What are your insights regarding some latest criminal events?

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original researches and review articles on exploring crime and punishment. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Juvenile crime
- Drug trafficking
- Human trafficking
- Robbery
- Smuggle
- Statutory rape
- Life imprisonment
- Death sentence
- Religion and crime
- Forgery, personation and cheating
- Causes and correlates of crime

Authors should read over the journal’s For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal’s Paper Submission System.

Please kindly notice that the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title is supposed to be specified and the research field “Special Issue – Crime and Punishment” should be chosen during your submission.
