Special Issue on Financial Planning

Call for Papers

Financial Planning is referred as a process of making plans to achieve monetary goals. It is can help you protect the assets you have now and increases your wealth in the future. Financial planning is sometimes considered to as an investment plan, but in personal finance can focus on other specific areas such as risk management, estate, education and retirement. The main purpose of financial planning is to project resource requirements for specific time periods and to identify the likely sources of the funds needed. It also is essential to identify the political, economic, and environmental conditions that are likely to affect the programs and activities of the organization.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on exploring financial planning. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Personal financial planning
- Application of financial products
- Analysis of financial planning
- Internet financial planning
- Financial planning education and training
- Case study

Authors should read over the journal’s Authors’ Guidelines carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal’s Paper Submission System.

Please kindly notice that the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title is supposed to be specified and the research field “Special Issue - Financial Planning” should be chosen during your submission.
