Special Issue on Social Media, Communication and Technology in Nursing

Call for Papers

These days’ health care systems are using social media to improve quality and safety of overall health care delivery, through access to information. Patients can also get detailed information about the diseases thorough Wikis’ and many other medical blogs. Use of technology to connect providers and patients is one aspect of healthcare informatics.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original researches and review articles on exploring social media, communication and technology in nursing. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Social media, communication and technology used in healthcare
- Clinical communication
- Interdisciplinary and teamwork communication
- Telehealth, telenursing and telemonitoring
- Social media and technology assisted patient education and support
- Case studies

Authors should read over the journal’s For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal at Paper Submission System.

Please kindly specify the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title. The research field “Special Issue – Social Media, Communication and Technology in Nursing” should be selected during your submission.
