Special Issue on Social Psychology

Call for Papers

Social psychology is the scientific study of individual behavior in a social context and seeks to understand the nature and causes of individual behavior in social situations. The way we perceive ourselves in relation to the rest of the world influences our behaviors and our beliefs. The opinions of others also affect our behavior and how we view ourselves. Social psychology is to deal with the way how our feelings, thoughts, beliefs, intentions and goals are constructed and how such psychological factors, in turn, influence our interactions with others.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on Social Psychology. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Social cognition and Social influence
- Attitudes and attitude change
- Violence and aggression
- Persuasion
- Prosocial behavior
- Prejudice and discrimination
- The bystander effect
- Love and attraction
- Nonverbal communication
- Leadership
- Group behavior
- Interpersonal processes
- Peace and conflict resolution
- Self and social identity

Authors should read over the journal’s For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal’s Paper Submission System.

Please kindly notice that the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title is supposed to be specified and the research field “Special Issue – Social Psychology” should be chosen during your submission.

According to the following timetable:

| Submission Deadline | January 22nd, 2019 |

For publishing inquiries, please feel free to contact the Editorial Assistant at submission.entrance1@scirp.org

PSYCH Editorial Office
psych@scirp.org