Special Issue on Social and Economic Development

Call for Papers

Social economics focuses on the relationship between social behavior and economics. It examines how social norms, ethics, emerging popular sentiments, and other social philosophies influence consumer behavior and shape public buying trends. It uses history, current events, politics, and other social sciences to predict potential results from changes to society or the economy.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on Social and Economic Development. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Economic growth and life satisfaction
- Well-being, welfare and economics
- Human factors and economic development
- Economic crisis and social impacts
- Poverty research
- Household finance
- Labor market study
- Policy and developmental factors

Authors should read over the journal’s For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal’s Paper Submission System.

Please kindly notice that the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title is supposed to be specified and the research field “Special Issue – Social and Economic Development” should be chosen during your submission.
