

Special issue on Public Health Nutrition Initiatives

Call for Papers

Public health is "the science and art of preventing disease, prolonging life and promoting health through the organized efforts and informed choices of society, organizations, public and private, communities and individuals". For example, the Child Health Nutrition Research Initiative (CHNRI)(2001) is a network of interested partners supported by the Global Forum for Health Research, based in Geneva, Switzerland. CHNRI efforts support the Millennium Development Goals of:

1. Eradicating extreme poverty and hunger,
2. Reducing child mortality, and
3. Combating HIV/AIDS, malaria and diseases in children.

CHNRI is helping to set research priorities in child health, development and nutrition, and resolve related methodological issues. It also sponsors research into priority child health and nutrition problems, especially in low- and middle-income countries, with a focus on research to inform policies for scaling up effective interventions. Our special issue concentrate on any relevant researches, don't hesitate to submit your article to us.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on exploring Public Health Nutrition Initiatives.
