

Special Issue on Population and Development

Call for Papers

In sociology, population is the number of people in a city or town, region, country or world. Demography is the statistical study of populations. It usually determined by a process called census. The goal of this special issue is to provide a platform for scientists and academicians all over the world to promote, share, and discuss various new issues and developments in the area of Population and Development.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on exploring Population and Development. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Covid-19 and the global demographic research
- Demographic statistics
- Emigration and resettlement
- Households
- Immigrants
- Integrating population and development strategies
- International migration
- Population dynamics
- Population health
- Population structure
- World population prospects

Authors should read over the journal's For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal's Paper Submission System.

Please kindly specify the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title. The research field “Special Issue - Population and Development” should be selected during your submission.

Special Issue Timetable:

Submission Deadline	December 22nd, 2021
Publication Date	February 2022

Guest Editor:

Scientific Research
Open Access

Advances in Anthropology

ISSN Online: 2163-9361

For further questions or inquiries, please contact Editorial Assistant at aa@scirp.org.