

Special Issue on Food Crisis

Call for Papers

Food Crisis refers to the human predicament caused by insufficient food supply, including the global food shortage, the sharp decrease in output and the excessive increase in food prices. According to the International Centre for Trade and Sustainable Development, failed agriculture market regulation and the lack of anti-dumping mechanisms cause much of the world's food scarcity and malnutrition.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original researches and review articles on exploring Food Crisis. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Food security
- Stunting and nutritional deficiencies
- Food stockpiling
- Famine
- Genetically modified crops
- Vitamin deficiency
- Coping with the global food crisis

Authors should read over the journal's For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal's Paper Submission System.

Please kindly notice that the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title is supposed to be specified and the research field “Special Issue – Food Crisis” should be chosen during your submission.

According to the following timetable:

Submission Deadline	November 28th, 2017
Publication Date	January 2018
