

Special Issue on Health Behavior and Health Promotion

Call for Papers

"Health Behavior and Health Promotion" is an academic field that explores the factors influencing individuals' choices and actions related to their health. It involves studying the psychological, social, and environmental influences on health behaviors, such as exercise, diet, and preventive actions. Researchers in this area aim to develop effective strategies and interventions to promote positive health behaviors and prevent the onset of diseases. The goal is to enhance overall well-being and improve public health outcomes.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on Health Behavior and Health Promotion. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Behavioral medicine
- Health behavior assessment and intervention
- Health promotion and disease prevention
- Nutrition, physical activity and health
- Prevention of addictive behaviors
- Mental health promotion
- Obesity and weight management
- Sexual behavior and health
- Healthy dietary behavior
