

Special Issue on Unemployment and Employment

Call for Papers

Unemployment occurs when a person who is actively searching for employment is unable to find work. Unemployment is often used as a measure of the health of the economy. Unemployment and underemployment is a social problem, when there is a recession, unequal supply and demand, layoffs, or technological changes workers are displaced. The goal of this Special Issue is to provide a platform for scientists worldwide to promote, share, and discuss various new issues and developments in the area of unemployment and employment.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on exploring unemployment and employment. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Causes of unemployment
- Effects of unemployment
- Unemployment and underemployment
- Employment promotion
- Employment fluctuations and wage rigidity
- Labor market and labor force

Authors should read over the journal's For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal's Paper Submission System.

Please kindly specify the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title. The research field “Special Issue - Unemployment and Employment” should be selected during your submission.
