Special Issue on Ecological Construction and Sustainable Development

Call for Papers

Ecology investigates the relationships and interactions between organisms and their environment. It is closely related to sustainable development which does not only focus on environmental issues but also combines the concern for preservation of natural systems with social and economic challenges. All aspects of this multidisciplinary field are studied in a variety of research groups in the Faculties of Sciences; Pharmaceutical, Biomedical and Veterinary Sciences; Applied Economical Sciences and Political and Social Sciences. The goal of this special issue is to provide a platform for scientists and academicians all over the world to promote, share, and discuss various new issues and developments in this area of ecological construction and sustainable development.

In this special issue, we invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles that explore ecological construction and sustainable development. In this special issue, potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Preserving genetic diversity
- Establishing a sustainable use of species and ecosystems
- Biogeochemical cycles and life-support systems
- Conservation of Biological Diversity and Ecological Integrity
- Ecologically sustainable development: origins, implementation and challenges
- Assessment of ecological sustainability

Authors should read over the journal's For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal's Paper Submission System.

Please kindly specify the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title. The research field “Special Issue – Ecological Construction and Sustainable Development” should be selected during your submission.
