

Special Issue on Mental Health Nursing

Call for Papers

For some people, mental health problems can be triggered by an event such as divorce, the death of someone close, birth, alcohol and drug abuse or changes in personal circumstances, including at work. Mental health nursing is a demanding but rewarding career choice. Your role would be promoting and supporting a person's recovery and enabling them to have more involvement and control over their condition. The goal of this special issue is to provide a platform for scientists and academicians all over the world to promote, share, and discuss various new issues and developments in this area of Mental Health Nursing.

In this special issue, we invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles that explore Mental Health Nursing. In this special issue, potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Psychological stress
- Psychiatric care
- Schizophrenia and nursing
- Neurosis and nursing
- Personality disorders and care
- Affective disorder and nursing

Authors should read over the journal's For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal's Paper Submission System.

Please kindly specify the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title. The research field “Special Issue – Mental Health Nursing” should be selected during your submission.

Special Issue timetable:

Submission Deadline	August 27th, 2019
