

Special Issue on Pediatric Infectious Diseases

Call for Papers

Pediatric Infectious Diseases is a specialized field of medicine focusing on the diagnosis, treatment, and prevention of infections in children, from newborns to adolescents. This includes a wide range of conditions caused by viruses, bacteria, fungi, and parasites. These diseases can be more complex in children due to their developing immune systems and unique exposure risks. Pediatric infectious disease specialists are experts in managing infections that are more common in children, are particularly severe, or have complex treatment needs, including vaccinations and the prevention of disease spread in both hospital and community settings.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on Pediatric Infectious Diseases. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Epidemiology
- Pediatric viral infections
- Pediatric bacterial infections
- Neonatal infections
- Pediatric HIV/AIDS
- Vaccine-preventable diseases
