

Special Issue on Social Psychology

Call for Papers

Social Psychology is an interdisciplinary domain that bridges the gap between psychology and sociology. It employs scientific methods and the empirical study of social phenomena to look at a wide range of social topics, including group behavior, social perception, leadership, nonverbal behavior, conformity, aggression, and prejudice. Social psychologists are interested in the impact that the social environment and group interactions have on attitudes and behaviors, they devise and carry out experiments that help point out relationships between different variables.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on exploring social psychology. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Basic and applied social psychology
- Major perspectives in social psychology
- Difference between social psychology and other disciplines
- Social environment and group interactions
- Social behavior under situational variables
- Sociological approach to social psychology
- Scientific methods and experiments about social psychology

Authors should read over the journal's Authors' Guidelines carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal's Paper Submission System.

Please kindly notice that the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title is supposed to be specified and the research field “Special Issue - Social Psychology” should be chosen during your submission.

According to the following timetable:

Manuscript Due	September 30th, 2014
Publication Date	November 2014

Guest Editor:

For further questions or inquiries
Please contact Editorial Assistant at psych@scrip.org