Special Issue on Adolescent Psychology

In the journal Psychology (PSYCH, ISSN Online: 2152-7199)

Detailed information about this journal: Indexing, Editorial Board, Author's

Guidelines

Adolescence is a transitional stage of physical and psychological development that generally occurs during the period from puberty to legal adulthood. Adolescence is usually associated with the teenage years, but its physical, psychological or cultural expressions may begin earlier and end later. A thorough understanding of adolescence in society depends on information from various perspectives, including psychology, biology, history, sociology, education, and anthropology.

We sincerely welcome scholar and expert with relative academic backgrounds to submit original research paper or review paper to this special issue on Adolescent Psychology. Potential topics or areas include, but are not limited to:

- Psychological development
- Cognitive development
- Social development
- Emotional and behavioral problems
- Personality traits and mental health
- Cultural perceptions and adolescents
- Parental involvement and family relationships
