

Special Issue on Adolescent Psychology

Call for Papers

Adolescence is a transitional stage of physical and psychological development that generally occurs during the period from puberty to legal adulthood. Adolescence is usually associated with the teenage years, but its physical, psychological or cultural expressions may begin earlier and end later. A thorough understanding of adolescence in society depends on information from various perspectives, including psychology, biology, history, sociology, education, and anthropology.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on adolescent psychology. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Psychological development
- Cognitive development
- Social development
- Emotional and behavioral problems
- Personality traits and mental health
- Cultural perceptions and adolescents
- Parental involvement and family relationships
- Sexual orientation and identity
- Alcohol use

Authors should read over the journal's For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal's Paper Submission System.

Please kindly notice that the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title is supposed to be specified and the research field “Special Issue – Adolescent Psychology” should be chosen during your submission.

According to the following timetable:

Submission Deadline	July 16th, 2019
Publication Date	September 2019
