Special Issue on Economic Growth

Call for Papers

Economic Growth refers to the long-term expansion of a nation's economy, measured by increases in its gross domestic product (GDP) or per capita income. It is a crucial indicator of a country's overall economic health and well-being, reflecting advancements in technology, productivity, and the standard of living. Economic growth is driven by various factors, including capital investment, human resources, technological innovation, and institutional frameworks. Understanding its drivers and constraints is essential for policy makers to design effective strategies for sustainable economic development.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on Economic Growth. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Theories and models of economic growth
- Macroeconomic analysis
- Microeconomics of economic growth
- Development economics
- Financial development and growth
- International economics of economic growth
- Human capital and growth
- Technological innovation and growth
- Trade, investment and growth
- Entrepreneurship and economic growth
- Productivity and growth
- Regional growth disparities
- Growth and income inequality
- Environmental and sustainable growth
- Institutional economics and growth

Authors should read over the journal's For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal's Paper Submission System.

Please kindly notice that the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title is supposed to be specified and the research field “Special Issue – Economic Growth” should be chosen during your submission.
