Special Issue on Institutional Theory

Call for Papers

As a special product of human society, the system is the essential rules, norms and concepts of group life. The scholars regard the theory of institution in the middle of the twentieth Century as "the early institutional theory", and the institutional theory after 1970s as "the new institutional theory". Early researchers mainly focus on the fixed institution and their impact on the organization, and the new institutionalism focus on institutional framework and the emergence of the institution, including the establishment of the institution, institution maintenance and institution change and spread. The goal of this special issue is to provide a platform for scientists and academicians all over the world to promote, share, and discuss various new issues and developments in the area of institutional theory.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original researches and review articles on exploring institutional theory. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- International research network of institutional theory
- Institutionalism and politics
- Institutionalism and economics
- Institutionalism and sociology
- The basic elements of institutionalism
- Traditional institutionalism
- New institutionalism
- System vicissitude process

Authors should read over the journal’s For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal’s Paper Submission System.

Please kindly notice that the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title is supposed to be specified and the research field “Special Issue – Institutional Theory” should be chosen during your submission.
