Special Issue on International Law Research

Call for Papers

International law is the general rule of law applicable between sovereign states and other entities with international personality. The content system of international law is determined by the content system of international relations. From the content of international relations, it includes political, economic, diplomatic, military, legal and other fields. In the course of interaction between countries in these different fields, some legally binding principles, rules and systems will gradually emerge and form. International law, as a norm of conduct among nations, is the result of various conflicts of interest and compromises in international cooperation and struggle. It reflects the coordination of the will of nations.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original researches and review articles on exploring international law research. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Customary international law
- Private international law
- International relations and rules
- International treaty
- International crimes
- International court
- International law and economics
- Humanitarian law
- Law issues in conflict and force
- Global order
- International territory and sovereignty

Authors should read over the journal’s For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal’s Paper Submission System.

Please kindly notice that the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title is supposed to be specified and the research field “Special Issue – International Law Research” should be chosen during your submission.

According to the following timetable:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Submission Deadline</th>
<th>February 27th, 2019</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Publication Date</td>
<td>April 2019</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Guest Editor:

For further questions or inquiries
Please contact Editorial Assistant at blr@scirp.org