Special Issue on Emergency Medicine

Emergency medicine is a medical specialty - a field of practice based on the knowledge and skills required for the prevention, diagnosis and management of acute and urgent aspects of illness and injury affecting patients with a full spectrum of undifferentiated physical and behavioral disorders. It further encompasses an understanding of the development of pre-hospital and in-hospital emergency medical systems and the skills necessary for this development. Emergency medicine physicians diagnose a variety of illnesses and undertake acute interventions to resuscitate and stabilize patients, but not usually provide long-term or continuing care.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on exploring Emergency Medicine.

Authors should read over the journal’s Authors’ Guidelines carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal’s Paper Submission System.

Please kindly notice that the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title is supposed to be specified and the research field “Special issue - Emergency Medicine” should be chosen during your submission.
