Special Issue on Human Rights & Justice

Call for Papers

Human rights are moral principles or norms that describe certain standards of human behavior and are regularly protected as natural and legal rights in municipal and international law. They are commonly understood as inalienable, fundamental rights and which are inherent in all human beings, regardless of their nation, location, language, religion, ethnic origin or any other status. They are regarded as requiring empathy and the rule of law and imposing an obligation on persons to respect the human rights of others. Whereas recognition of the inherent dignity and of the equal and inalienable rights of all members of the human family is the foundation of freedom, justice and peace in the world.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on Human Rights & Justice. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Gender justice and women's rights
- Gender and human development
- Children’s rights and child welfare
- Humanity and social security
- Ethics, moral and social behavior
- Criminal justice and governance
- Law and justice
- Public, policy and rights
- Anti-slavery and human trafficking
- Democracy studies
- Political participation and political rights
- Race & ethnicity

Authors should read over the journal’s For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal’s Paper Submission System.

Please kindly notice that the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title is supposed to be specified and the research field “Special Issue – Human Rights & Justice” should be chosen during your submission.

According to the following timetable:
For publishing inquiries, please feel free to contact the Editorial Assistant at submission.entrance1@scirp.org

JSS Editorial Office
jss@scirp.org