Special Issue on Social Change and Class Analysis

Call for Papers

Class is a conceptual tool for analyzing social inequality, social contradictions and conflicts. The salient feature of classical Marx's class theory is the theory of "hostile class". The modern class theory is the product of adapting to the new social differentiation and the diversification of social forms, far beyond the scope of the ownership of the means of production and the class of the hostile. From a sociological perspective, society is the field of struggle for control of resources and opportunities among different classes. The result of social structure and social order finally reflects the power to allocate or obtain social resources and life opportunities. The goal of this special issue is to provide a platform for scientists and academicians all over the world to promote, share, and discuss various new issues and developments in the area of social change and class analysis.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original researches and review articles on exploring social change and class analysis. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Class, crisis and state
- Class structure and power structure
- Social conflict and class consciousness
- Social stratification
- Social inequality
- Modern social class
- The evolution of the historical class
- Institutional transformation and social stratum change

Authors should read over the journal’s For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal’s Paper Submission System.

Please kindly notice that the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title is supposed to be specified and the research field “Special Issue – Adolescent Education and Development” should be chosen during your submission.
