Special Issue on Agricultural Water Conservancy

Call for Papers

The research contents of agricultural water conservancy include: management of small and medium rivers, flood control of farmland, waterlogging and drainage, irrigation, water supply of agriculture and animal husbandry, soil and water conservation, salt and alkali land improvement, reclamation, desert transformation and other water conservancy measures. Agricultural water conservancy is an essential material basis for agricultural development. At present, the low efficiency of agricultural water resources utilization still exists in many countries. And the reform of agricultural water supply must rely on the whole society. How to design water-saving incentive mechanism, improve water conservancy project management, and improve the system which is beneficial to agricultural industrialization and urbanization is the prerequisite to optimize the management of agricultural water.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original researches and review articles on exploring agricultural water conservancy. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Agricultural irrigation system
- Soil moisture monitoring
- Agricultural water-saving measures
- Agricultural water conservancy facilities
- Agricultural waterlogging and drainage
- Agricultural soil and water conservation
- Efficiency of agricultural water
- Water price management of agricultural water
- Policies and investments in agricultural water

Authors should read over the journal’s For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal’s Paper Submission System.

Please kindly notice that the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title is supposed to be specified and the research field “Special Issue – Agricultural Water Conservancy” should be chosen during your submission.
