Special Issue on Gender and Sexuality in Psychology

Call for Papers

Gender is generally conceived as a set of characteristics or traits that are associated with a certain biological sex. The formation of gender is controversial in many scientific fields, including psychology. Specifically, researchers and theorists take different perspectives on how much of gender is due to biological, neurochemical, and evolutionary factors (nature), or is the result of culture and socialization.

Human sexuality is the way people experience and express themselves sexually. This involves biological, erotic, physical, emotional, social, or spiritual feelings and behaviors. Social aspects deal with the effects of human society on one's sexuality, while spirituality concerns an individual's spiritual connection with others. Sexuality also affects and is affected by cultural, political, legal, philosophical, moral, ethical, and religious aspects of life.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on Gender and Sexuality in Psychology. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Gender studies
- Gay and lesbian
- Sexual assault and abuse
- Sexual orientation
- Sexual relationships
- Sexual patterns and behaviors
- Sex differences
- Heterosexual sex
- Bisexual behaviors

Authors should read over the journal’s For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal’s Paper Submission System.

Please kindly notice that the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title is supposed to be specified and the research field “Special Issue – Gender and Sexuality in Psychology” should be chosen during your submission.
