Financial innovation is the act of creating new financial instruments as well as new financial technologies, institutions, and markets. There are three categories of innovation—institutional, product, and process. Institutional innovations relate to the creation of new types of financial firms such as specialist credit card firms. Product innovation relates to new products such as derivatives, securitized assets, and foreign currency mortgages. Process innovations relate to new ways of doing financial business, including online banking and telephone banking.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on financial innovation. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Financial innovations
- Innovation and firm performance
- Product innovation
- Institutional innovations
- Innovative market
- Business innovation
- Futures, options, and derivatives
- Innovative financial strategies
- Internet finance

Authors should read over the journal’s For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal’s Paper Submission System.

Please kindly notice that the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title is supposed to be specified and the research field “Special Issue – Financial Innovation” should be chosen during your submission.
