Special Issue on

Manufacturing and Production Economics

Call for Papers

Production is a process of combining various material inputs and immaterial inputs (plans, know-how) in order to make something for consumption (output). Economic well-being is created in a production process, meaning all economic activities that aim directly or indirectly to satisfy human wants and needs. The degree to which the needs are satisfied is often accepted as a measure of economic well-being. In production there are two features which explain increasing economic well-being. They are improving quality-price-ratio of goods and services and increasing incomes from growing and more efficient market production.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on Manufacturing and Production Economics. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Production and market analysis
- Capital, investment and production planning
- Cost, pricing and efficiency
- Price volatility and analysis
- Production growth and performance
- Productivity analysis
- Income model
- Benefit-cost analysis and accounting
- Manufacturing and competitive advantage
- Economic evaluation and management policy
- Labor management and strategy
- Supply chain management
- Trade-off and Stock

Authors should read over the journal’s For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal’s Paper Submission System.

Please kindly notice that the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title is supposed to be specified and the research field “Special Issue – Manufacturing and Production Economics” should be chosen during your submission.
