Special Issue on Law and Economics

Call for Papers

Law and economics is the application of economic principles to analyze the effects of various laws on the individual and society at large. In other words, economic concepts are used to explain the purpose and effects of various laws, to assess which legal rules are economically efficient, and to predict which legal concepts will be effective and which will not.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on Law and Economics. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Economic analysis of the law
- Comparative analysis
- Legal impacts on economic process
  - Efficient economic operations
- Socio-economic legislation
- Legal regulation
- Intellectual property and economic development
- Corporate legal service

Authors should read over the journal’s For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal’s Paper Submission System.

Please kindly notice that the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title is supposed to be specified and the research field “Special Issue – Law and Economics” should be chosen during your submission.
