

Special Issue on Global Trends on Covid-19 Research

Call for Papers

"Global Trends on Covid-19 Research" is an academic topic that focuses on the latest advancements, studies, and findings related to the ongoing Covid-19 pandemic. It encompasses diverse areas such as virology, epidemiology, public health, clinical research, diagnostics, therapeutics, vaccines, and social dynamics. This research field aims to understand the virus's characteristics, transmission patterns, risk factors, and the effectiveness of preventive measures and interventions. It sheds light on global trends in combating the pandemic, informing policy-making, and addressing challenges posed by the virus on a global scale.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on Global Trends on Covid-19 Research. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Virology and viral dynamics
- Prevention and public health
- Epidemiology and transmission patterns
- Surveillance systems and data analysis
- Mathematical modeling, analysis and forecasting
- Public health interventions and policies
- Clinical management and treatment
- Diagnostics and testing strategies
- Neurologic outcomes of COVID-19
