

Special Issue on Law and Development

Call for Papers

Law and development is an interdisciplinary study that explores the impact of law, legal frameworks, and legal institutions. It examines the relation between law and development and analyzes how to use law as an instrument to promote economic and social development. The goal of this special issue is to provide a platform for scientists and academicians all over the world to promote, share, and discuss various new issues and developments in the area of Law and Development.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on exploring Law and Development. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Economic law
- International and domestic legal orders
- Law and development movements
- Law and diplomacy
- Law and society
- Legal anthropology
- Legal culture
- Legal origins
- Legal system
- New law and development
- Rule of law

Authors should read over the journal's For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal's Paper Submission System.

Please kindly specify the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title. The research field “Special Issue - Law and Development” should be selected during your submission.
