

Special Issue on Urban Living

Call for Papers

Urban areas emerged as the source of the greatest challenges that the planet has faced since humans became social. Although cities have proven to be humanity's engines of creativity, wealth creation and economic growth, they have also been the source of much pollution and disease. Rapid urbanization and accelerating socio-economic development have generated global problems from climate change and its environmental impacts to incipient crises in food, energy and water availability, public health, financial markets and the global economy. The goal of this special issue is to provide a platform for scientists and academicians all over the world to promote, share, and discuss various new issues and developments in the area of Urban Living.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on exploring Urban Living. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:
