

Special Issue on Mental and Emotional Health

Call for Papers

Mental health includes our emotional, psychological, and social well-being. It affects how we think, feel, and act. It also helps determine how we handle stress, relate to others, and make choices. Mental health is important at every stage of life, from childhood and adolescence through adulthood. Emotional health is about how we think and feel. It is about our sense of wellbeing, our ability to cope with life events and how we acknowledge our own emotions as well as those of others.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on Mental and Emotional Health. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Mental illness and treatment
- Prevention and promotion in mental & emotional health
- Mental, emotional, social and physical wellbeing
- Mental health services
- Mental healthcare
- Positive emotion regulation
- Emotional risk factors
- Mental health assessment
- Psychotherapy and physical therapy
- Coping with depression and anxiety
- Primary care and mental health
- Public policies and mental health
- Substance abuse and mental health
- Child and adolescent mental health
- Relationships, family and mental health
- Mental & emotional health of the elderly
- Mental health in pregnancy
