Special Issue on Health and Well-Being

Call for Papers

"Health and Well-Being" is focused on the study of physical, mental, and social well-being of individuals and populations. This field of study aims to evaluate the determinants of health, including biological, behavioral, and environmental factors, and how they influence overall well-being. Health and well-being research tends to focus on the prevention and management of illness, promotion of healthy behaviors, and the creation of supportive environments for good health. This field incorporates a range of disciplines, including public health, epidemiology, psychology, social work, and medicine. The ultimate goal of this field of study is to improve health and well-being outcomes for individuals, communities, and societies as a whole.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on Health and Well-Being. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Health risk behaviors
- Epidemiology and biostatistics
- Health equity
- Life satisfaction
- Health policy and health promotion
- Chronic disease prevention
- Mental health and well-being
- Health education and behavior
