Special Issue on Health Promotion and Disease Prevention

Call for Papers

Health Promotion and Disease Prevention is an academic topic focused on promoting healthy behaviors and preventing diseases among individuals and communities. It involves the study and implementation of strategies and interventions that promote overall well-being, educate about health risks, and encourage the adoption of healthy lifestyle choices. This field encompasses various disciplines and approaches, including health education, community outreach, policy development, and healthcare system improvements, to address public health challenges and reduce the burden of preventable diseases.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on Health Promotion and Disease Prevention. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:
