

Special Issue on Public Health

Call for Papers

Public Health is an interdisciplinary field focused on protecting and improving the health of populations through policies, education, and research. It addresses a wide range of issues including disease prevention, health promotion, epidemiology, environmental health, and health equity. The goal is to provide organized efforts to prevent health crises, enhance the quality of life, and ensure access to healthcare, thereby improving the overall health outcomes of communities and populations globally.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on Public Health. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Epidemiology
- Environmental health
- Public mental health
- Biostatistics
- Health services management
- Health policy and management
- Public health surveillance
- Healthcare systems
- Community health
- Global health
- Occupational health and safety
- Nutritional epidemiology
- Quality of life
- Social and behavioral sciences in public health
- Infectious disease control and prevention
- Health promotion and education
- Health equity and disparities
- Responses to health emergencies

Authors should read over the journal's For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal's Paper Submission System.

Please kindly notice that the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title is supposed to be specified and the research field “Special Issue – Public Health” should be chosen during your submission.

According to the following timetable:
