

Special Issue on Personalized Medicine

Call for Papers

Personalized medicine is an innovative approach to healthcare that aims to tailor medical treatment and interventions to individual patients, taking into account their genetic makeup, lifestyle, and environmental factors. It involves the use of advanced technologies, such as genomics and biomarkers, to identify specific characteristics and risk factors in individuals, enabling healthcare providers to make more accurate diagnoses, predict disease outcomes, and determine customized treatment plans. The goal of this special issue is to provide a platform for scientists and academicians all over the world to promote, share, and discuss various new issues and developments in the area of Personalized Medicine.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on exploring Personalized Medicine. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Individualized treatment
- Predictive modeling
- Tailored interventions
- Bioinformatics and health informatics
- Biomarker identification and application
- Clinical genomics
- Cancer genomics and precision oncology
- Disease prognosis
- Expression analysis, metabolomics, proteomics
- Personalized combination therapy
- Personalized healthcare
- Personalized medicine into healthcare practice
- Pharmaceutical clinical trials
- Pharmacogenomics in clinical practice
