Special Issue on Public Service and Public Administration

Call for Papers

Public Service and Public Administration is an academic field that examines the theory and practice of governing and managing public organizations, as well as delivering services to the public. It explores the principles, processes, and challenges of public administration, including policy formulation, budgeting, personnel management, and implementation of public programs. Researchers in this field analyze the structure and function of government entities, as well as strategies to enhance efficiency, effectiveness, and accountability in public service delivery.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on Public Service and Public Administration. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Public service and civic engagement
- Public policy analysis
- Public finance and management: budgeting, taxation, and financial management
- Organizational theory and efficiency: structure, behavior, and dynamics of public organizations
- Public personnel management and public service delivery.
- Public sector ethics and accountability
- Politics of public service
- Intergovernmental relations
- Public governance and leadership
- Decision-making
- Comparative public administration
- E-government and digital transformation
- Collaborative governance: between public, private, and nonprofit organizations
- Comparative public administration
