

Special Issue on Economic and Social Development

Call for Papers

Economic and social development refers to the process through which the well-being and quality of life of individuals and communities improve over time, driven by economic growth, social progress, and institutional advancement. It encompasses efforts to reduce poverty, enhance education and healthcare, promote equality, and create inclusive, sustainable economies. This multidisciplinary field examines how policies, governance, investment, and innovation can shape both economic performance and social outcomes. Balancing economic efficiency with social equity, it aims to foster resilient societies that offer opportunities and dignity for all.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on exploring Economic and Social Development. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Development economics
- Social policy
- Poverty and inequality studies
- Human development
- Urban and regional development
- Rural development
- Education and development
- Health and development
- Labor and employment studies
- Environmental economics
- Governance and institutional development
- International development

Authors should read over the journal's For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal's Paper Submission System.

Please kindly specify the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title. The research field “Special Issue - Economic and Social Development” should be selected during your submission.
