

Special Issue on Financial Crisis, Trade and Policy

Call for Papers

A financial crisis is any of a broad variety of situations in which some financial assets suddenly lose a large part of their nominal value. In the 19th and early 20th centuries, many financial crises were associated with banking panics, and many recessions coincided with these panics. Other situations that are often called financial crises include stock market crashes and the bursting of other financial bubbles, currency crises, and sovereign defaults.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on Financial Crisis, Trade and Policy. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Macroeconomic policy
- Impacts on international trade and global chain
- Impacts on exports and imports
- Monetary policy and banking strategy
- Government policy and regulation
- Economic policy and countermeasures
- International monetary crisis
- Financial crisis and the global financial system
- Slowdown in productivity
- Inflation and recession
- Firms survived and rebuilt
- COVID-19 and global economy

Authors should read over the journal's For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal's Paper Submission System.

Please kindly notice that the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title is supposed to be specified and the research field “Special Issue – Financial Crisis, Trade and Policy” should be chosen during your submission.

According to the following timetable:
