Special Issue on International Economics & Finance

Call for Papers

International economics is concerned with the effects upon economic activity from international differences in productive resources and consumer preferences and the international institutions that affect them. International finance is the branch of financial economics broadly concerned with monetary and macroeconomic interrelations between two or more countries. International finance examines the dynamics of the global financial system, international monetary systems, balance of payments, exchange rates, foreign direct investment, and how these topics relate to international trade.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on International Economics & Finance. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Quantitative methods
- Econometrics
- International business and finance
- International trade and macroeconomics
- Market structure
- Macroeconomics
- Global marketing
- International political economy
- Global financial system
- Public finance
- International monetary systems
- International economic policy
