Special Issue on International Economics and Finance

Call for Papers

International Economics and Finance is an academic discipline that examines the economic and financial interactions between nations. It delves into topics such as international trade, foreign exchange markets, international financial institutions, and the impact of globalization on economies. This field also studies the policies and strategies that nations adopt to manage their international economic and financial relationships. By understanding these complexities, scholars and practitioners can gain insights into how global economic forces shape national policies and vice versa.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on International Economics and Finance. Potential topics include, but are not limited to

- International trade and investment
- International business and finance
- International macroeconomics
- International banking
- Foreign exchange markets
- International monetary economics
- International financial markets and institutions
- Globalization and its economic impact
- International taxation
- International development economics
- Regional economic integration
- Strategic decisions in global perspective
- International corporate finance
- Mergers and acquisitions
- Global financial crisis

Authors should read over the journal's For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal's Paper Submission System.

Please kindly notice that the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title is supposed to be specified and the research field “Special Issue – International Economics and Finance” should be chosen during your submission.
