

Special Issue on Political Economy

Call for Papers

Political Economy is an interdisciplinary field that examines the relationships between politics and economics, focusing on how political institutions, power, and processes shape economic systems, policies, and outcomes. It explores topics such as the role of government in regulating markets, distribution of wealth and resources, and the impact of economic systems on social and political structures. Political Economy draws from various disciplines including economics, political science, sociology, and history.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on Political Economy. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Political economy in macroeconomics
- Comparative political economy
- International political economy
- Financial political economy
- Political economy & government
- Monetary and fiscal policy
- Political economy of central banking
- Public policy and political economy
- Political economy of growth and development
- Political economy of reform and regulation
- Labor political economy
- Historical political economy
- Cultural political economy
- Economics, politics and sociology
- Environmental political economy

Authors should read over the journal's For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal's Paper Submission System.

Please kindly notice that the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title is supposed to be specified and the research field “Special Issue – Political Economy” should be chosen during your submission.
