

Special Issue on Economics and Sociology

Call for Papers

Economics is a social science that studies the production, distribution, exchange, and consumption of goods and services in society. It focuses on explaining how individuals, organizations, and governments make choices under conditions of scarcity, seeking to maximize their satisfaction or utility. Economics research involves analyzing economic systems, markets, policies, and institutions to understand their functioning, efficiency, and impact on society. The goal of this special issue is to provide a platform for scientists and academicians all over the world to promote, share, and discuss various new issues and developments in the area of Economics and Sociology.

In this special issue, we invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles that explore Economics and Sociology. In this special issue, potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Macroeconomics and microeconomics
- International Economics
- Labor Economics
- Development Economics
- Social Stratification and Inequality
- Gender Sociology
- Labor and Industrial Sociology
- Urban and Community Sociology
- Social Institutions and Organizations
- Social Psychology

Authors should read over the journal's For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal's Paper Submission System.

Please kindly specify the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title. The research field “Special Issue - Economics and Sociology” should be selected during your submission.
