

Special Issue on Maternal-Fetal & Neonatal Medicine

Call for Papers

"Maternal-Fetal & Neonatal Medicine" is an academic field that focuses on the health and well-being of pregnant women, their unborn babies (fetuses), and newborn infants. It involves the study and management of various medical conditions and complications that arise during pregnancy, childbirth, and the early stages of infancy. Researchers and healthcare professionals in this field work to understand the complex interactions between the mother, fetus, and neonate, and to develop strategies to optimize the health outcomes for both. They conduct studies to improve the diagnosis, treatment, and prevention of various maternal and neonatal conditions, aiming to ensure safe pregnancies, healthy deliveries, and the best possible health outcomes for both mother and baby.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on Maternal-Fetal & Neonatal Medicine. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Prenatal diagnosis and screening
- High-risk obstetrics
- Maternal-fetal imaging and ultrasound
- Pregnancy complications and management
- Intrauterine growth restriction
- Fetal therapy and intervention
- Labor and delivery management
- Maternal mental health and pregnancy
- Maternal-fetal pharmacology
- Maternal-fetal infectious diseases
- Maternal-fetal immunology
- Preterm birth and prematurity
- Fetal development and physiology
- Fetal cardiology
- Fetal genetics and genomics
- Women's reproductive health
