

Special Issue on Environmental Health Sciences

Call for Papers

Environmental Health Sciences is an academic discipline that explores the intricate relationship between the natural, living, and work environments and human health. It aims to reveal the mechanisms through which environmental factors impact human health, evaluate these factors, and devise strategies to control their potentially harmful effects. This discipline encompasses diverse areas such as air and water pollution, chemical hazards, and noise pollution. Through rigorous research, Environmental Health Sciences provides scientific insights for preventing and controlling environmental contamination, thereby safeguarding public health.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on Environmental Health Sciences. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Environment, health & safety
- Environmental medicine & public health
- Environmental pathogens
- Disease control and prevention
- Environmental epidemiology
- Occupational medicine
- Water and health
- Environmental pollution and human health
- Toxicology and chemical hazards
- Radiological health
- Ecosystem health and biodiversity
- Sustainable environment and health policy
- Health risk assessment

Authors should read over the journal's For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal's Paper Submission System.

Please kindly notice that the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title is supposed to be specified and the research field “Special Issue – Environmental Health Sciences” should be chosen during your submission.
