Special Issue on Psychological Assessment and Psychometrics

Call for Papers

Psychological assessment defined as a way of assessing an individual's behavior, personality, cognitive abilities, and several other domains. The purpose behind many modern psychological evaluations is to try to pinpoint what is happening in someone's psychological life that may be inhibiting their ability to behave or feel in more appropriate or constructive ways; it is the mental equivalent of physical examination. Other psychological evaluations seek to better understand the individual's unique characteristics or personality to predict things like workplace performance or customer relationship management. Psychometrics is a field of study concerned with the theory and technique of psychological measurement.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on Psychological Assessment and Psychometrics. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Measurement of skills, knowledge and abilities
- Evaluation standards and procedures
- Assessment and observation
- Mental health care and assessment
- Problems, behaviors and psychological treatment
- Emotional evaluation and intervention
- Mental state examination
- Psychoanalysis
- Clinical psychometrics
- Workplace and school performance

Authors should read over the journal’s For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal’s Paper Submission System.

Please kindly notice that the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title is supposed to be specified and the research field “Special Issue – Psychological Assessment and Psychometrics” should be chosen during your submission.
