Special Issue on Depression & Anxiety Research

Call for Papers

Depression is a state of low mood and aversion to activity that can affect a person's thoughts, behavior, feelings, and sense of well-being. Anxiety is an emotion characterized by an unpleasant state of inner turmoil, often accompanied by nervous behavior, such as pacing back and forth, somatic complaints, and rumination. Stress is a feeling of strain and pressure. These two moods affect human health and social behaviors in many aspects.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on Depression & Anxiety Research. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Depression & anxiety disorders
- Panic disorder and social phobia
- Relations with mood and personality
- Cognitive behavioral therapy
- Psychiatric treatment and nursing
- Cognitive impairments
- PTSD, depression and anxiety
- Social anxiety
- Suicide and abuse problems
- Postpartum depression

Authors should read over the journal’s For Authors carefully before submission. Prospective authors should submit an electronic copy of their complete manuscript through the journal’s Paper Submission System.

Please kindly notice that the “Special Issue” under your manuscript title is supposed to be specified and the research field “Special Issue – Depression & Anxiety Research” should be chosen during your submission.
