Special Issue on Clinical Psychology and Behavioral Health

Call for Papers

Clinical Psychology and Behavioral Health is an interdisciplinary field focusing on the assessment, diagnosis, treatment, and prevention of mental disorders, as well as the promotion of psychological well-being. This area integrates theories and methods from psychology, neuroscience, and health sciences to understand how behavioral and mental processes affect health and illness. Practitioners and researchers study cognitive, emotional, and social processes, employing various therapeutic techniques to treat mental health issues ranging from everyday stress and relationship problems to severe psychiatric disorders. The field is committed to evidence-based practices to improve the mental and emotional health of individuals across their lifespan.

In this special issue, we intend to invite front-line researchers and authors to submit original research and review articles on Clinical Psychology and Behavioral Health. Potential topics include, but are not limited to:
